First World Problems

There is a popular hashtag on Twitter that is called #FirstWorldProblems. As Americans, we are often easily frustrated with what are called "First World Problems". Here are a few examples:

When you say something on social media which you think is really clever, but hardly anyone "likes" it.

When you run out of hot water for the shower because someone else took too long.

When you and your spouse can't agree on what temperature to keep the thermostat.

When your phone battery dies before you get home from work to charge it.

When you get chicken tenders from the drive through, but they forget the dipping sauce.

For most of us, the worst discomforts we face each week are trivial. That's why it is so hard to relate to all that Jesus did for us when he came to earth and suffered on the cross.

James 1:2-3

Consider it pure joy, my brothers and sisters, whenever you face trials of many kinds, because you know that the testing of your faith produces perseverance.

I encourage you this week to place your focus on Jesus and what He has done for you. When that is your focus, forgetting the dipping sauce is no longer such a big deal.

I love you all,

Tim
