Inside-Out Christianity

A dear friend of mine emailed me the following story this week.

One Sunday morning during the invitation which followed the sermon, one of the most well respected senior adult men in our church made his way down front to speak with me. He serves as a faithful deacon and Sunday school teacher. He has a kind, gentle, and generous personality and is one of the hardest workers in the church. I thought he must have been coming to pray for someone else. However, he took my hands and remarked, "Preacher, I want you to pray that I will be on the inside what people see on the outside."

As followers of Jesus we strive to live holy for the glory of God. But, our actions constantly fall short of our desires. Paul tells us the following in the book of Romans.

Romans 7:15

I do not understand my own actions. For I do not do what I want, but I do the very thing I hate.

Ironically, the more sanctified we become, the more aware of the extent of our sinful hearts we become. We should always mourn over sin, but rejoice that we are becoming more sensitive to those sins. This will allow us to seek to walk in greater holiness.

I pray that we all strive to live lives that reflect the life Jesus has called us to live. "This world is not my home."

I love you all,
Tim
