Utah Linemen Turn on the Lights

Sixteen linemen and two managers from Rocky Mountain Power, Utah, gave two weeks of their lives to travel to storm-ravaged New Jersey communities in the wake of Sandy. "The whole goal was, get the lights on some way, somehow, even if we had to lash them up. They'll be working on that for years," said RMP lineman Dee Schumers.

The Utah workers said they had never experienced such damage, but were overwhelmed with the gratitude that residents expressed to them. "I don't think I had ever encountered a situation of that magnitude in my entire career with Rocky Mountain Power," said Todd Lindley.

But with all the destruction and loss, the workers said, "It was the incredible gratitude of the residents they helped that would be remembered most."

"They were almost jumping up on my truck to give me a hug," said Brent Maag.

"I got hugs and a few kisses — and that was from the men," added Paul Garcia.

Perhaps the only thing better than feeling intense gratitude ourselves, is being the cause of praise and gratitude in the lives of others. To this end, don't just "turn on the power"-- be the light.

Matthew 5:16

Let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works and praise your Father in heaven.

I love you all,

Tim
