Weary in Doing Good

Our society has coined the phrase, "Burn Out". It is used when people tire of their job or profession and quit just because they are bored with it. The pressure becomes too much, they feel that they cannot go on. The task has lost its challenge; too much of the same thing.

It is conceivable that this could happen in a boring, tedious, hard job, but it should not happen in marriage, child-rearing, worship, and our relationship with our Lord, Jesus Christ.

Let us notice Paul's word to the Galatian Christians. "Let us not become weary in doing good, for at the proper time we will reap a harvest if we do not give up" (Galatians 6:9 NIV).

Current thinking says that we should give up anything that "puts us in a bind," makes us unhappy, does not make us feel fulfilled, or anything that has lost its challenge or zest. While it is true that there are some things that we ought to give up on, there are some real values in life that should never be walked away from. They are the responsibilities to our husband, wife, children, parents and God.
