The Bible Says

Be Crucified With Christ

Apostle Paul said, "I have been crucified with Christ. It is no longer I who live, but Christ who lives in me" (Galatians 2:20). What does it mean to be crucified with Christ? Certainly, we were not physically present at Calvary when Jesus was nailed to the cross. Yet the death of Jesus must become deeply personal to every true believer. Jesus died for our sins, but His sacrifice also calls us to surrender our lives to Him. Paul explains in Romans 6:6, "We know that our old self was crucified with him in order that the body of sin might be brought to nothing, so that we would no longer be enslaved to sin." Sin once held us captive, separating us from God and leaving us unable to save ourselves. Jesus paid the price necessary to overcome our sins. A price we could never pay. Through His death, He made a way for us to be freed from sin's dominion.

But being crucified with Christ means more than acknowledging what Jesus did for us. It means recognizing that our old way of life must end. We cannot continue to live for ourselves, pursuing our own desires without regard for God's will, and still claim that Christ is Lord of our lives. Following Jesus requires a change in our priorities, our attitudes, and our direction. Paul had not ceased to exist as an individual. Rather, his life was no longer centered on himself. His identity, purpose, and daily choices were now shaped by his being crucified with Jesus Christ. The same must be true of us. This does not mean that Christians never struggle with temptation or make mistakes. It means that sin is no longer our master. We belong to Christ, and our lives should reflect that belonging. We must ask ourselves: Have I truly surrendered my life to Him, or am I still trying to live on my own terms? Our response must be more than admiration for the sacrifice He made for us. It must be a life surrendered to His authority, shaped by His teaching, and devoted to His will.
